The Keystone State As Result of Primary Election*F. D. R. REPUDIATED*Primary Election Result Was Defeat For the CIO and Senator Guffey

(By International News Service)

BOSTON, May 19—Interpreting the Republican primary election as a repudiation of the Roosevelt administration, Alfred M. Landon today forecast November success for the G. O. P. in the Keystone State.

At the same time, national Republican leaders made plans to invade President Roosevelt's home State of New York with the 1936 Republican presidential nominee, laying the ground work next week at a series of conferences with leading New York State Republicans.

"I was particularly impressed by the huge vote cast in the Republican primary. It is an encouraging sign to me that they will carry Pennsylvania in the Fall," he added. "The result of the Democratic primary certainly was a repudiation of both Senator Joseph F. Guffey and the administration. It cannot possibly be interpreted as other than a defeat for the CIO and the Roosevelt administration with which the CIO is linked up."

Local Institute Planned
By The Bristol W. C. T. U.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Bristol will hold a local institute, Saturday, in Bristol Presbyterian Church, Cedar street.

At the morning session, beginning at 9:45, Miss Eloise Melville, Philadelphia, secretary of the Speakers' Bureau on International Relations, will address the institute. Miss Melville attended the Geneva Conference last year, and is well informed concerning the condition of disrupted Europe.

At the afternoon session Mrs. Llewellyn Nolan, Malvern, state corresponding secretary for the W. C. T. U., will give one of her inspiring talks.

It has been proposed that the members and their friends take a box luncheon and attend both sessions.

IL DUCE TO BE ABLE TO SWING BALANCE OF POWER*New Power of Mussolini Has Brought Britain to Woo
His Friendship*GERMANY PLAYS TO HIM

(This is the first of a series of five articles analyzing Italy's military and political strength in Europe.)

By Frank Gervasi

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1938)

ROME, May 19—(INS)—In his thick, square-ended fingers stocky Benito Mussolini holds the key to European peace.

This was the consensus of military and political observers who have been in Italy throughout the Abyssinian campaign, witnessed Italy's bold intervention in Spain and watched gathering storm clouds in Europe with anxious eyes.

Il Duce wasn't bluffing when he stood recently before the suppliant Senate and in incisive language served notice on Europe that Italy has men and armaments enough to make war an expensive proposition for any competitor.

Diplomats and military naval attaches with few exceptions admitted to International News Service they believed Mussolini spoke the truth, that his words were backed with facts.

Does this mean that Italy has become invincible?

"No," replied these experts. "The fact that Italy is ready to take on any single nation in Europe—and perhaps a combination of nations—doesn't mean Italy can't be beaten in a knockdown and drag-out war."

"Well, then," it might be argued, "does this mean that Italy is overrated as a military power?"

Again the experts answer: "No." There is no nation in the world today that can't be defeated by proper combination of the military, naval, and aerial power of enemy nations.

To seek to determine whether Italy is invincible or not is absurd according to men trained in the art of mass murder.

The questions to be considered should be:

"How powerful is Italy?"

"Can she withstand a long war?"

"Does she hope to fight a winning war against a power such as Britain or France?"

"Why does she arm to the teeth?"

The answer as to why Italy arms until it seems her tax-burdened people can stand the strain no longer is the most important of all.

Key of Mussolini's diplomacy lies in this answer:

"To play winning diplomatic poker you've got to have the army, navy, air force and industrialization necessary to call anybody's hand."

Many attaches and diplomats in Rome haven't been able to convince their governments of the simple truth that the military Italy of today isn't the Italy of Caporetto or of Adua. But they don't fool themselves.

They concur in the belief that Mussolini is strong enough to dish it out to any nation willing to test Italy's ability to take it.

They are certain Il Duce doesn't seek trouble, although all concede he might go so far as to fight a preventive campaign if he foresees the ghost of an attack from any given nation.

This was made clear by Il Duce himself when he stated that he agrees with the military axiom that the best defense is frequently to take the offensive.

Experts are unanimous in asserting their belief that Il Duce's swiftness of foreign policy is based on his conviction that no nation in Europe will seek war with Italy because of Italy's immense military, naval and air force.

Mussolini, according to this theory, knows no nation will fight him because the cost of such a conflict will be too devastating in life and money.

Not even mighty Britain, with her vast naval power and economic resources, would be willing to tackle Mussolini's armed forces alone in the Mediterranean. Not because Britain fears she might lose such a war. But because England, like every other potential enemy, counts the cost.

Mussolini, however, is in a different psychological position. To Italy the cost does not count so heavily.

Il Duce reasons thus:

If war is waged against Italy, the aggressor does so to crush Fascism.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

An eight day grandfather clock from the collection of A. L. Worthington, Spring Valley, has been loaned for the Doylestown Centennial celebration.

This clock, due to design, material and workmanship, is considered one of the finest of its kind in existence.

It was in the possession of the Powell family from about 1775 until bought by the present owner about 35 years ago.

The maker of the clock was William Huston, Philadelphia.

One to one hundred is the age limit for the contest to be sponsored by the Buckingham Harmonica Orchestra on May 28, 1938, at the Buckingham Grange Hall, Buckingham, at eight p. m. (d. s. t.).

The contestants are to be anyone from anywhere who can or who thinks he can play a harmonica. The winners will be determined by the decision of the judges and partly by the election of the audience. No present members of the Buckingham Harmonica Orchestra will compete.

Many cash prizes will be awarded. There will be a prize for the youngest, oldest and the best players.

This is not only going to be a contest, but a jubilee for all harmonica players. All former members of the orchestra will be welcomed of course to come and play many old time songs together.

The Buckingham Harmonica Orchestra has now been organized about nine years. It has about twenty-five active members. Several hundred harmonica players have passed through this organization during its existence, but it still has a few of the very early members in it.

The orchestra is directed by J. Samuel Carr, and is a self-supporting organization.

The monthly meeting of Newtown Garden Club was held at the club house a few days ago with 30 persons present. This meeting was featured by an exchange of plants.

A report was given by Miss Cora Willard, of the picnic and tour at Bowman's Hill. Eight members from Newtown were in attendance.

Miss Jessie Wilson gave a vivid account of a trip she and Mrs. Ridge and Miss Willard, Newtown, and Mrs. Flack, Merion, made through Virginia during the celebration of Garden Week.

WARBURTON CASE
ATTRACTS NOTABLES*Society Leaders, Celebrities and Others Filled the Court Room*BEFORE JUDGE KELLER

DOYLESTOWN, May 19—Society leaders, celebrities, including internationally famous magazine editors, sportsmen and other in various walks of life crowded Court Room No. 2 yesterday in the Bucks County Court House for the hearing in equity in the case of Evelyn Hall (Babe) Warburton, of New York City, widow of the accidentally slain "Buzzy" Warburton, against Mary B. Warburton and Barclay H. Warburton, Sr., of Wyncote and Palm Beach, Fla.

The plaintiff is asking the Court for her husband's $18,000 investment in his farm in Doylestown township and a collection of personal belongings that her parents-in-law allegedly refuse to return.

"Buzzy" Warburton died Nov. 26, 1936, following a gunning accident on the Doylestown township farm, just about the time that he was developing his place as an experimental farmer.

Since "Buzzy's" death, "Babe" has been working in New York at a Fifth avenue department store, for although her husband was the grandson of the late John Wanamaker, his fortunes were never magnificent.

"We had hoped that our farm in Doylestown township would be our permanent abode," Mrs. Warburton testified.

"The farm was fixed up much more elaborately than 'Buzzy' and I could afford and the Major and Mrs. Warburton were paying for it," she continued. "We showed the Major and his wife the new plans of our farm and they always approved."

"My parents-in-law always treated me with respect during the 5½ years we were married."

No one outside the family knows what stage the trust fund negotiations had reached when "Buzzy" died.

"Babe" is the former Evelyn McManus, of New Rochelle, N. Y. When a youngster, she eloped with H. Denny Pierce, then fresh from Princeton.

In the Winter of 1930, when the Pierces were at Palm Beach, "Babe" and "Buzzy" met. The next year she went to Reno for a divorce. "Buzzy" married her almost before the ink on the decree was dry.

Cancelled checks amounting to $18,850 were presented in evidence as spent by Warburton on the farm.

Mrs. Warburton testified that "Buzzy" received $750 a month from a trust fund and that he exceeded his allowance by $10,000 the first year they were married, and that the Major paid the bills.

The case is being heard before Judge Itham H. Keller.

in that State. They visited Middletown, Warrenton, Fredericktown, Stafford, Warsaw, Gloucester City, Yorktown and Williamsburg.

Gorgeous blooms of blue phlox, pansies, dogwood, azaleas and lupines were seen. They came home by way of the Sky Line Drive, Natural Bridge and Gettysburg.

The club will furnish the program at the meeting of the Newtown New Century Club at the home of Mrs. John Lagar, Wrightstown, Wednesday. The members of the club will present a play and each member will represent some flower.

Doylestown Borough Council, at a busy session, appointed a new president to fill the vacancy left by the resignation of Benjamin F. Horner, fixed the tax rate at 10 mills, the same as before, ordered the clerk to advertise for bids for the purchase of a new police car, and donated $500 to the Doylestown Centennial celebration, which was 50 per cent of what the committee asked Council to appropriate.

BENSALEM PUPILS TO PRESENT SPRING CONCERT*Exhibition of Art Will Also Be Staged in High School
This Evening*A VERY FINE PROGRAM

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, May 19—Bensalem High School's annual Spring Concert to be held at the school auditorium tonight is the largest and probably most attractive musical demonstration the students of the school have ever attempted in this annual event.

Earl Frick, musical director of the school, has arranged a fine all-around musical program varying from a bottle number to the "Light Cavalry Overture," selections rendered by the orchestra, and from Tannhauser's "Pilgrim Chorus" to "Ti-Pi-Ti-Pi-Tin" in vocal varieties. A program of 16 separate parts including musical selections by orchestra, vocalists, choruses, and special renditions will be given by the musically inclined students at the local high school.

Together with this will be an art demonstration in the upper corridor and wing of the school. Included in the art exhibit which is presented under the able supervision of the art instructor at the school, Sherman Dancer, are both junior and senior high work in either optional or required work or both in the following methods: pen and ink drawing, crayon, water color, tempera, and charcoal, beside some displays of mechanical drawing.

The most outstanding among the art display is that of an eighth grade boy, Craft Emmett, who specializes in pen and ink drawing, and a senior girl, Elin Aashberg, in pencil and tempera art. The entire art exhibit is the largest the school has ever displayed at any one particular time according to Mr. Dancer.

Among the most outstanding selections being rendered in the musical program is an arrangement of 110 mixed voices of both the senior and junior choruses, singing the "Pilgrims' Chorus" from Tannhauser. The senior chorus will also sing the famous "Blue Danube Waltz," by Johann Strauss, while the junior chorus will offer two selections, "Sun Worshippers," an Indian song, and Pinsuti's "Spring Song."

A trumpet trio composed of Kimbel Faust, Henry Bogard, and Eugene Snyder, accompanied by Mabel Ridge, will offer Herbert Clark's "Flirtation Overture." There will also be a trumpet quartet, which consists of Ed Dillon, Bill Curtis, Billy Dunn and Anthony Niemczak, who will be accompanied on Page Three

Wires.*Doubt Hitler Plans To Approach Roosevelt

Berlin, May 19—A suggestion that Reichsfuehrer Hitler is considering a personal approach to President Roosevelt with the aim of clarifying German-American relations were discounted in official circles here today.

However, the hostile press campaign against the United States as an alleged "disturber of international relations," ended abruptly, obviously on orders from above.

German editors and publishers, it was learned, have been instructed to lean backwards to preserve friendly relations and prevent further friction. The orders were issued after a German newspaper termed America as an international "disturber."

The entire subject of German-American relations has been a subject of intensive study by Hitler and his aides in recent weeks.

Starting with virulent editorials when Mayor La Guardia of New York spoke of opening a "Nazi chamber of horrors," at the New York Worlds Fair, the campaign in the German press has gained momentum steadily.

As a result, the situation was fast reaching a point where strict diplomatic relations were coming to be regarded as inevitable. Consequently, the Nazi high command issued its orders to the press to cease fire.

Well-informed observers held out some hope that Germany's reply to the American protest over the recent decree requiring registration of Jewish property may pave the way for a new understanding.

Growth of K. G. E. Told Of At 50th Anniversary

LANGHORNE, May 19—On Saturday evening a delightful time was held at the 50th anniversary celebration of the Langhorne Castle, No. 262, Knights of the Golden Eagle.

Following a prayer by the Supreme High Priest, A. H. Jamison, over 50 people enjoyed a delicious turkey dinner, served in the fire station by the Ladies' Auxiliary of the local Fire Company.

The guests then assembled in I. O. O. F. hall and were joined by a goodly number of the town folk to hear speeches made by the supreme chief, Russell C. Holmes, and the supreme master of records, F. W. Aton, who gave a short resume of the Langhorne Castle, No. 262, and its first accomplishments.

The speakers were presented by Noble Chief George C. Mather. During the last 10 years the Langhorne Castle paid out $5,648 for sick benefits, and $800 funeral benefits.

After the speech-making there was a two-hour program by a professional vaudeville troupe, and from the number of encores demanded by the audience, the program was immensely enjoyed.

POLICE HOLD MAN FOR ATTEMPTED LARCENY*Suspect Caught in Alleged Effort to Steal Camera at Finegan's Drug Store*WIFE IS RELEASED

A man is being held by the police charged with attempted larceny. The prisoner, Albert Maduck, 38, 3210 W. Pico Boulevard, Los Angeles, California, also uses the alias of Herbert Maddox, according to the police. A woman believed to be the wife of the prisoner was questioned but later released. She gave the name of Helen Maddox and her age as 25. She told the officers that her husband had been arrested and served four months in jail in Florida. He denied this and told the officers he had never been arrested. She remained at police headquarters overnight.

The man was apprehended in Finegan's Drug Store, Farragut avenue, yesterday afternoon. After leaving the telephone booth states Edward Finegan, the stranger leaned against a display case, apparently waiting for his call to be completed. As Mr. Finegan passed the case he noticed that the glass door of the case had been pushed partly open, with several cameras on shelves within easy reach. Looking steadily at the stranger Mr. Finegan asked "Where have I seen you before?" as it dawned upon the druggist that the visitor resembled one who was in his store last August when a camera disappeared.

At first denying that Mr. Finegan had seen him previously, then admitting that he "gets around," the stranger according to the pharmacist, replaced on a shelf in the case a camera which he held in back of him, the camera making a noise as it clicked against the glass. A brief scuffle ensued, after which Mr. Finegan locked the front door of the store until a police officer arrived. In the establishment at the time were a salesman, and a small boy, Marvin Walter, Monroe street. The stranger was unarmed.

Police have finger-printed Maddox and are awaiting the receipt of word of their identification.

Mrs. Maddox told police that she knew nothing of the transaction in the Finegan store. She sat in a car outside. The car carried a Nevada license.

The couple have also told the police that they came here from Atlantic City and that they traveled around quite a bit. An effort is being made by the police to properly identify Maddox.

Maduck or Maddox was committed, this morning, to the Bucks County Jail for 10 days.

CORONER'S JURY
FREES THE DRIVER
OF CAR KILLING MAN*Jury Holds Donald A. Balderston, Dolington, Blameless For Accident*ONLY TWO WITNESSES*Balderston Tells Jury He Did Not See Victim Until He Was Just Few Feet Away

After hearing testimony in the Municipal Building here yesterday afternoon concerning the automobile accident in which Jeremiah F. Johnson, 74, Washington Crossing, was struck and killed, a coroner's jury exonerated 23 year old Donald A. Balderston, Dolington, from all blame in the accident.

Only two witnesses testified before Dr. H. Clayton Moyer, Bucks County coroner, who conducted the hearing. The first witness called was Private T. F. Cartagno, Pennsylvania Motor Police, who testified that he was called to the accident about 7:45 p. m. on the evening of April 8th.

Private Cartagno described to the jury that Balderston's car struck the victim, Jeremiah Johnson, and that he died as a result. He also described the extent of the damage to the car as a result of the collision. The weather was rainy and the road, which leads from Newtown to Washington Crossing, was wet. The accident occurred, according to Cartagno, about 300 feet from the canal bridge, just east of Washington Crossing. The officer stated that he questioned Balderston and that he was sober. The defendant was taken before Justice of the Peace D. H. Krane and held under $2000 bail pending the jury's decision which was given yesterday.

The only other witness to testify, Balderston, driver of the car, testified that he has been driving since he was 16 years of age. He told the jury that he was traveling about 35 miles per hour and that he did not see the deceased until he was just a few feet from him. Balderston said that the glare from a street light and the heavy downpour of rain dimmed his vision. The defendant stated, however, that his car was in perfect mechanical condition and that his windshield wiper was working. Balderston said that there were no other cars in the vicinity at the time and that he was the only witness to the accident.

The jury, which brought in the verdict of an unavoidable accident which exonerated Balderston from all blame, was composed of: John A. Shaffer, foreman; Alonzo Bishop, Patrick A. McGonigle, Alexander Dougherty, Clarence Wilson and Thomas Gorton.

BENDING THE TWIG

What of the America of tomorrow? What lies beyond the veil of the future in the destiny of the nation? The mystery is no mystery, for it lies within our power to make of the United States of the next generation what we will; those who will carry on after we are gone are the children of the present generation looking to us for guidance. The secret of the future can be found in one word—education. The democracy which is our proud boast is safe in this country only so long as we maintain the principle of free education. Such is the view of Dr. Harold G. Campbell, who speaks officially as superintendent of the schools of New York City.

Whatever may be the courses of study in the elementary, secondary and higher schools of this country says Dr. Campbell, the most important element in the curriculum is the training for citizenship, which includes teaching the value of human liberty, freedom of thought, freedom of expression and freedom of action within only those limits prescribed by respect for the rights of our fellows.

The concept, long taken for granted in this land of freedom, that must be given to all children here, equal educational opportunities regardless of race, color or creed, has taken on new and more vital significance in view of the summary manner in which the idea has been discarded in some other countries.

Schools in America do not merely teach democracy out of books; each is a democracy in miniature, practicing in the relationship between teacher and pupils, and among pupils themselves principles which are the national framework. The schools want no "splendid" isolation, they are integral parts of the community, state and national life.

A community makes many investments, but the most important is its investment in the proper development of the children who in a few years will be the nation.

NEW CHAPTER

Dog lovers throughout the world, worried over the fate of the famous pack of St. Bernard dogs at the Swiss monastery of that name, need worry no longer. Caged as enemies to society since the killing of a little girl in the Alpine snows last year, the dogs have been banished from the country in which they and their ancestors performed mountain rescue work for generations; their work will go on thousands of miles away from their old habitat.

In good works in the mountains of Tibet, the big fellows will expiate their sin. In charge of faithful Brother Cyrille, the whole pack set sail from Marseilles and now is on the high seas enroute to the Himalayas.

The incident which closed forever the career of the dogs at the Hospice of Grand Saint Bernard Pass in the Alps was a dreadful thing, says Brother Cyrille, but he also asks that world to give his pets another chance. At heart they are gentle, kind and obedient creatures, eager to atone and to serve mankind in a refuge which monks have constructed at 5,000 meters altitude near Lhasa, Tibet.

Despite his great age, Brother Cyrille is accompanying the dogs across oceans and mountains to deliver them in person to his colleagues.

The sex in the main runs to two types—the womanly woman, and the one who looks smart in shorts.

"CONTRABAND" by Dennis Wheatley

CHAPTER XIV

Rudd took the policeman's shoulders and Gregory his feet. Then, followed by the woman, they carried him into the house.

"Straight down the passage," she ordered and then, addressing Gregory who brought up the rear, "if you try and trick me I'll put a bullet in your back. Straight on now and the third door on your right."

"Thank you, mother," said Gregory amiably, "but I'd rather have a nice cup of warm tea in my tummy. When you're tired of holding that thing I'll hold it for you and you shall make me one."

"They proceeded along a stone flagged passage, evidently the servants' quarters, but when Rudd thrust his way backwards through the third door on the right Gregory saw that it was a heavy baize-covered affair which led to the main part of the house. As Gregory passed through the swinging door the woman jammed the muzzle of her pistol firmly in the small of his back and switched on the lights.

They saw that they were in the main hallway of the house, from which a broad staircase led to the floors above. There was a long settee in one corner and, on a small table some way from it, stood a telephone.

"Put him on the couch," said the woman, making straight for the instrument.

"Please, one moment," Gregory begged. "The police won't thank you for lugging them out at this hour in the morning to arrest one of their own people. Hang on until this chap comes round. I swear to you on my honor that he is a policeman. He'll be able to tell you so himself in a minute."

The policeman's eyes flickered open and Rudd pulled him up into a sitting position on the settee. He groaned again and for a moment put his head between his hands. Then he lifted it painfully and stared about him.

"Better now?" asked Gregory. "I'm terribly sorry I knocked you out. I was under the impression that you were someone else, but you remember me, don't you? We met a few nights ago at Trouville."

"Yes—yes, of course. I remember now; you got me out of a nasty mess, didn't you? I didn't know it was you either when I caught you trying to break into this place, but I'm afraid I'll have to ask you for an explanation."

"Plenty of time for that," said Gregory easily. "I think we're working on the same thing, but from different angles. We've landed ourselves in a new mess since you passed out though. This lady here with the heavy armaments, I don't yet know her name."

"Mrs. Bird," the woman supplied noncommittally.

"Well, Mrs. Bird seems to think that all three of us are up to no good here and she's just about to phone for the local coppers. I think it would be a good thing for all of us if you can persuade her not to."

The policeman stood up a little grudgingly. "Mrs. Bird," he said, "my name's Inspector Wells, and I'm down here on special work for Scotland Yard. Here is my card of authority."

She shook her head stubbornly. "I may be right and I may be wrong, but what were you doing in our grounds I'd like to know? As for antagonizing the local police, what do we pay rates for? You stay where you are young men and don't you move a muscle while I telephone."

A stair creaked above them and they all glanced up. Unheard by any of them a young girl had appeared on the landing and was now descending the broad straight stairway. She was barefooted and clad only in her nightgown. Two long braids of golden hair coiled about her head made a halo gleaming in the light. Her blue eyes were wide open and staring. Instantly they all realized that she was walking in her sleep.

"Don't wake her," whispered Mrs. Bird. "Not a sound, please—or the poor lamb may get the shock of her life."

In two silent strides Gregory was beside the older woman. His left hand closed over her right and in a single sharp twist he forced the revolver from between her fingers.

If looks could have killed, Gregory would have fallen dead upon the spot. Mrs. Bird, however, brushed passed him without a word and hurried on tiptoe to the foot of the wide staircase.

The girl was now halfway down the flight. She was quite young, eighteen or nineteen perhaps, slim as a boy, with only faintly rounded breasts and hips. Her face was small and delicately chiselled; her creamy cheeks were slightly flushed in sleep. Above her short straight nose and white forehead the great oval of plaited hair formed a shimmering golden crown. There was something ethereal and fairylike about her as she moved slowly down toward them which made it seem hardly possible that she was warm flesh and blood. The young Inspector thought that in all his days he had never seen anything quite so lovely.

Mrs. Bird mounted a few stairs and took the girl very gently by the arm. With hardly a pause she turned in her tracks and began to walk up the stairs again, led now by the elder woman.

"Wells," said Gregory in a sharp whisper, "go up with them. There may be another telephone upstairs."

Wells nodded and with one hand on the banister rail began to tiptoe up the stairs after the two women.

"Weren't she a pretty kid?" murmured Rudd. "Almost like a fairy off a Christmas tree, only wanted a wand and a couple of wings."

Gregory shrugged. "Pretty enough, but quite brainless I should think. Anyway, it was a bit of luck for us she turned up when she did or we would have had to waste more time arguing with the old woman."

When Mrs. Bird and the Inspector came down the stairs again Gregory asked her sharply:

"What's the name of this place?"

"Quek Park, Birchington."

"Good, now before we go on any further I want you to satisfy yourself that our friend here really is a police inspector. The quickest way is for you to get on the telephone to Scotland Yard."

"That sounds sense," she said, a little subdued, now that she no longer had the whip hand over them.

The result of her call proving satisfactory, her attitude changed at once from acute suspicion to apologetic interest.

"Not another word, please," Gregory protested. "You were perfectly right to hold us up and you did it darn well into the bargain but now, joking apart, would it be troubling you too much if we asked you to make us a cup of tea? We've been up all night and I'm sure the others could do with one too."

"Certainly, sir, of course I will. Maybe you could do with a bite to eat as well. What about some nice scrambled eggs for an early breakfast?"

"That'd be splendid and really kind of you, Rudd, you go along with Mrs. Bird and give her a hand. I want a word with the Inspector."

As they left the hall Gregory moved over to Wells, who had sat down on the settee again.

"Now let's try and get things frightened out a bit," he said. "I'm awfully sorry about having lugged you over the head but it would never have happened if it hadn't been for the stupidity of your own people in refusing to allow us to work together."

"Don't worry about the knock you gave me," Wells' freckled face lit up with a boyish grin. "You were at the Yard this morning, weren't you? I know what you told them, and that you're acting on behalf of Sir Pellimore Gwaine-Cust, but you didn't give away what you're investigating for him."

"Need we fence? I'm trying to get to the bottom of the international smuggling racket."

"Right. Well, I'm after the same thing. The Yard was asked to undertake a special inquiry and they've given me a chance at it as my first independent investigation. I was put on to this special work about six weeks ago and, so far, I've spent most of my time trying to get a lead from the British end of it; working back from the retailers, who are cutting the prices of their goods, to the wholesaler and so, eventually, to the actual importers of contraband."

"You didn't have much luck, then?"

"Not much to begin with, but the police net's a wide one once it starts to operate. We traced some goods from a dress shop in Birmingham to a wholesale house in Regent Street and I put the chap who runs it through his paces about a week ago. Of course, he swore he had no knowledge there was anything fishy about the parcel he'd handled and said that it'd been sold him through a French house, by a woman representative, as bankrupt stock. I managed to rattle him pretty badly though by telling him that if he couldn't put me on to the woman who'd sold him the goods I'd have to run him as a dealer in contraband himself. Then I gave him twenty-four hours to think it over."

"Next day," Wells continued, "the dealer gave me a description of the lady you met in Deauville. Then he told me he had met the lady in the lounge of the Carlton because she didn't want to be seen in his offices, and he believed that when she was in London she stayed at the hotel."

"My next move was to the Carlton and the management there gave me every assistance they could. The lady proved to be a Miss Sabine Szentes. We circulated her description through the usual channels and asked for the cooperation of the French police as well. They found her for us in Paris where she has some connection with a genuine silk stocking factory."

Gregory frowned on learning that Sabine was so much more deeply involved than he had supposed, but Wells continued without a pause, making his story as short as he could.

"I flew to Paris with faked credentials as a buyer for a bigish London firm, but had to call at the stocking factory several times before I finally met the woman I was after. Guess they finally figured they'd have to have her vamp me to close the deal I was talking, but not doing much about it. Well, we played each other along. I took her to lunch and we talked for hours. She pretended to like me pretty well, but I knew she didn't mean it—though I tried to seem like I was falling hard for her line."

"Finally, when she was called to the telephone and left her bag at the table I went through it and pinched that telegram. She must have missed it soon after and that was why she invited me to meet her that night in Deauville, where she said she had to go on business. I met her all right... you know the rest of the story!" Wells grinned sheepishly.

"Not a very romantic end to a story with such a beautiful heroine," Gregory laughed.

in their selection of a special arrangement of "Whispering Hope" by Hawthorne by Gladys Cragg.

Vocal selections will include a duet by Erna Letterle and Rosalie Queney of Sigmund Romberg's and Kahn's "Who Am I To Know?" while a group of girls will render the hit from "Maytime" called "Will You Remember?"

A group of 14 in four part ensemble will render "All In An April Evening" by Robertson.

Another group of selections entitled "Summertime" from the operetta "Porgy and Bess" and "Frans Quita's Serenade" will be offered on the musical saw by Jack Frick. "Summertime" is the very well-known composition written by the late George Gershwin.

The most interesting and novel selections will be given by a group of eighth grade students from the "A" class, comprised of boys and girls in a choir of 14. They will play "Sweet Sue," a popular song, on a set of bottles. During this number the lights in the auditorium will be turned off and colored water, secured through the mixture of vegetable juices inserted in bottles, will light up when the notes are struck. A flashlight connection under the bottles will send the light rays through them when struck by a player.

Piano accompanists include: Mrs. G. Reimer, Mabel Ridge, Virginia Macenzie, Kathryn Harrison, Gladys Cragg, and Dorothy O'Dea.

The program, beginning at eight o'clock, will take approximately one hour and a half for completion and there will be no charge for admission, but an offering to help the school musical program will be taken.

Rev. Fr. Francis Flood Dies In Philadelphia

Flood received his education at elementary schools in that city, and later attended St. Charles Seminary in Overbrook.

He was assigned to St. Agnes Hospital, Philadelphia, as chaplain after his graduation, serving in that capacity for one year. For nine years he was located at the Visitation Parish, Philadelphia, then for 16 years was rector of St. Charles' Church, here, retiring from active service in February of this year.

In February of 1937, the Rev. Flood celebrated the 25th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood.

The Rev. Flood was succeeded at the local parish by the Rev. Father John L. Nugent, who was former assistant rector of the Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul.

Solemn Requiem Mass will be said in St. Charles' Church, Monday at 10 a. m., with the Rev. Father Nugent being assisted by several priests.

Newtown Church Filled For Aldersgate Rally

NEWTOWN, May 19—Methodists of Bucks County filled the Newtown Methodist Church and Sunday School auditoriums to overflowing last evening, when an Aldersgate Rally was conducted.

The speaker on this occasion, which marked the 200th anniversary of the conversion of John Wesley, was the Rev. J. S. Ladd Thomas, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Germantown, an outstanding leader in church circles.

The Rev. Thomas' message was based upon the experience that came to John Wesley on May 24, 1738, and what it means to individuals today.

Twenty churches were represented, with the pastors of many in attendance.

There were several clergymen who participated in the service. The Rev. Harold Bouquoy, pastor of Trevose Church, was organist; and the Rev. J. Horace Barnes, Jr., Scottsville, led the singing. Prayer was offered by the Rev. J. Carpenter Zook, pastor of Bristol Methodist Church; with the closing prayer by the Rev. Alexander B. Davidson, Doylestown. The chairman of the meeting was the Rev. Francis C. Thomas, Yardley. The Rev. Carl Hammerly is pastor of the hostess church.

ON SCREENS IN BRISTOL

BRISTOL

"Prison Nurse," the Republic Picture starring Henry Wilcoxon and Marian Marsh, now showing at the Bristol Theatre, is an accurate and realistic portrayal of prison life, and the problems which those in charge of prisons have to face.

Both sides of the question are shown. That is, the treatment of prisoners, and the responsibilities of the warden and his aides.

When an epidemic breaks out in the prison following a disastrous flood, the regular physician cannot handle all the sick cases. A young doctor, Henry Wilcoxon, who has been convicted of a "mercy-death," is called in to help. Three nurses are also sent to the prison to aid with the inoculation of the inmates. One of these girls, Marian Marsh, falls in love with Wilcoxon. She eventually is able to help him clear his name of the charges which sent him to prison and he is freed.

"Prison Nurse" was directed by James Cruze from a screen play by Earl Felton and Sidney Salkow, which was based on a novel by Louis Berg, a noted doctor.

HOPE RAISED SHAD IS INCREASING IN RIVER

During First Week of April Lower Delaware Bay Registered Good Catches

WARM WEATHER IS AID

Hope is expressed that shad in increasing numbers are entering Delaware Bay and making their way up the Delaware River.

This is good news to lovers of the toothsome shad, and also to the "Isaac Waltons" of Bucks and adjoining counties.

It is stated in the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin, column entitled "Men and Things," that "During the first week of April the gilliers in the lower bay registered good catches, considering the season, but the succeeding cold spell halted the run to such an extent that wholesale prices mounted to 35 or 38 cents a pound, with 42 cents demanded for choice fish. Warmer temperatures now, however, are expected to spur the spawning instinct, and unless fish dealers are mistaken, Philadelphia will have ample opportunity to indulge its appetite for Delaware shad before the month ends.

"If the promise is borne out, the result can be attributed solely to the valiant efforts of the New Jersey Fish and Game Commission in propagating the species. Catches had reached the vanishing point in 1927, when the Commission, yielding to the pleas of veteran fishermen deprived of their customary means of earning a livelihood, installed an experimental hatchery at Pennsville.
The following year a permanent plant was established at Hancock's Bridge on Alloway creek and the hatch mounted annually, reaching a peak in 1936 with the release of more than six million fry.

"Just what caused the shad to desert the Delaware, in which they were once so common that good-sized fish could be bought for a dime, has been a matter of dispute. The most reasonable explanation is that increasing pollution drove them out, the feverish activity of the World War, with its tremendous dumping of industrial wastes, resulting in virtual extinction.
It may be countered that abatement of pollution in the past two decades has not been on a scale that would tempt the fastidious shad to frequent the Delaware; certainly Philadelphia, the principal offender, has done little to merit such good fortune. But it is to be borne in mind that improved catches have been entirely confined to the lower river and bay where sewage has been materially diluted.

"Incidentally cooks who desire to reap fitting reward for their efforts are advised to inquire closely as to the origin of the shipment. In favor and texture, Delaware shad are the cream of the species. But if they ascend too far up the river—say beyond the Pennsville-New Castle line—they are very apt to absorb quantities of the oil film which coats the surface; and a petroleum soaked shad is no delicacy. Unusual flabbiness of the fleshy section back of the head is an indication of unfitness, readily discoverable when the fish is cut into.
The defect, however, often escapes the notice of even experienced dealers, anxious to head off complaints, and the Delaware shad is thereby suffering an undeserved loss of reputation.

"Fishing rights once formed an important element of value in all of the lands abutting the Delaware, from Billingsport north to Lambertville and New Hope. By far the most important of these fisheries were those clustered about Gloucester Point, on the gravelly shores above the Horseshoe. That they attained commercial importance is evidenced by mention of one of them in the will of Sarah Bull, made in 1742, which took in a considerable stretch of shore-line extending below the mouth of Newton Creek."

YARDLEY

The members of Knowles-Doyle Post, American Legion, have accepted an invitation to attend the Memorial Day services to be held in St. Andrew's P. E. Church, Sunday morning, May 29th, at 11:15. Other organizations of the town have also received invitations to the special services.

The fifth and sixth grades of Yardley public school and their teachers,
Mrs. James Foley and Miss Gladys Miller took a trip this week to the following places of interest: State House, Old Barracks, and Museum, in Trenton, N. J.; Molly Pitcher's well, at Tennyson, N. J.; and the Walker Gordon Dairy, with the return trip made through Princeton, N. J., to see the University.

The Great Game of Politics

Committee, the connection of the relief rolls with elections was shown by Mr. Hopkins' own tabulation of the number of persons receiving Federal assistance by months since 1933. A direct relation is thus mathematically revealed between the increase in the relief load and the political campaign. It is shown that in non-election years the relief roll normally declines between June and October, but that in the election years—1934 and 1936—this normal summer decline is reversed.

"In 1934," the report says, "there were 2,283,000 more people on relief in November than in June. In 1936, the increase between July and November was 1,212,000 persons." But in the non-election years, in this period, the figures show a sharp decrease, as follows—

1933—a decrease of 3,243,000
1935—a decrease of 3,165,000
1937—a decrease of 2,618,000

"Nor," continues the report, "are these fluctuations related to industrial production. In 1933, the relief load declined 3,243,000 in four months and in the same four months in the report which one month later the Federal Reserve Board's index also declined twenty points. But in 1934, an election year, the relief rolls expanded by 2,283,000 in the corresponding four months, although the Reserve

Board's index of production was moving upward through September and October."

"In the next election year—1936—between July and November—the combined relief rolls increased by 1,212,000, despite the fact that the Reserve Board's index moved steadily upward from 104 per cent of normal in June to 114 per cent in November. The following year—1937—in which there was no national election, the rolls declined 2,618,000 from June to November, although there was then an exceedingly sharp decline in the production index."

"In the light of these facts," the report asserts, "it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that fluctuations in the relief rolls are determined not by actual need as reflected in general business conditions, but by political considerations related to the general elections."

IT DOES seem, however, aloof Mr.
Hopkins may remain, that the deduction thus made is justified by the figures. There is another point made in the report which one would think Senators about to hand Mr. Hopkins another billion and a half dollars would like clarified. During his testimony before the committee, the report says, Mr.

Hopkins, four separate times, asserted that even if there should be a pickup of 1,500,000 in private employment the next six months, he would still need the billion and a half to cope with the situation.
That is an astounding statement.
If a difference of 1,500,000 persons on the relief rolls makes no difference in the amount of money needed, what would make a difference?
Mr. Hopkins has estimated that WPA work costs an average of $63.50 per month per person. On this basis the absorption of 1,500,- 000 persons by private employment ought to mean a reduction in cost of $95,250,000 a month, or more than a billion a year. Yet Mr.
Hopkins says just as much money would be needed. This is the sort of thing that baffles those who try to follow New Deal reasoning and mathematics. It might suggest to even an Administration Senator, not completely under the White House anesthetic, that perhaps some control over relief expenditures is essential.

Check and Be Sure YOUR WIRING IS RIGHT!

OUT of sight...out of mind!
It's an old saying that is practised by all too many householders in their consideration of home wiring.

Are you in the average class?
Do you guess that it's all right?
If your answer is "yes", turn over a new leaf right now. Call your neighborhood electrical contractor...or your Philadelphia Electric Company office and ask for a thorough check. Be sure that the wiring and the outlets in your house are sufficient to accommodate both present and future needs. Then you can be sure of a full supply of electricity to operate all the electric servants you will ever want. Remember, adequate wiring serves and saves!

The menu consisted of the following: baked ham, baked beans, potato salad, deviled eggs, cole slaw, tomatoes and lettuce, pickles, rolls, cake, ice cream, candy and coffee.

The regular monthly business meeting followed the banquet.

TIMELY RECIPES You Will Want to Try!

Maple Cream Pudding

Two cups milk; one cup maple syrup; two tablespoons cornstarch; one-fourth teaspoon salt; two eggs; one-half cup chopped walnuts.

Scald one and three-fourths cups milk with the maple syrup in the top of a double boiler. Combine the remaining milk with the cornstarch and salt and add gradually to the hot mixture, stirring constantly. Cook 25 minutes, then add mixture to slightly-beaten eggs. Cook five minutes longer. Pour into the serving dish and sprinkle with chopped nuts, while the pudding is still hot. Chill and serve with plain or whipped cream.

Maple Icing

One cup maple syrup; two egg whites. Boil syrup without stirring until it spins a fine thread. Pour gradually over the stiffly-beaten egg whites and beat until thick enough to spread. Delicious on plain cup cakes, or for white layer cake. Nuts may be added.

Maple Mousse

One cup maple syrup, two eggs and one pint whipped cream. Boil maple syrup. Beat the egg yolks and stir them into the syrup while it is cooling. Add one pint whipped cream. Then fold in the beaten whites of the two eggs. Beat all together thoroughly and pack in mold or in ice trays. Freeze four hours.

Cocoanut Maple Candy

Mix one cup powdered sugar, one-fourth cup milk, one-half cup maple sugar syrup and boil until a soft ball will form when tried in water. Add one-half cup cocoanut, beat until thick and drop on buttered paper.

Apple-Cot Cookies

One-half cup shortening; one cup sugar; one-half teaspoon salt; one egg; three and one-half cups flour; three teaspoons baking powder; one-half cup milk; one teaspoon vanilla; three tablespoons cocoa.

Melt the shortening and place in a large mixing bowl. Then add the sugar, salt and the beaten egg. Beat well. Sift the flour and baking powder together and add to the mixture alternately with the milk. Add the vanilla. Divide the dough in half and into half the mixture work the cocoa. Roll about one-fourth inch thick and cut with a fancy cookie cutter. The light part may be rolled a little thinner. Cut round holes in the center of the light ones and press a light cookie over a dark one. Then put one large teaspoon of filling made of these ingredients into each hole.

One-half pound of apricots; three or four medium-sized apples; one cup water; sugar.

Wash the apricots and place them over the fire with about one cup water. Pare and core the apples and slice them thin. Add to the apricots, then add a dash of cinnamon and sugar to taste. Let them cook slowly until the mixture is a little thicker than applesauce. Fill the cookies and bake in a moderate oven, 375 degrees for 20 minutes. (This filling may be made in advance.)

Speed Apple Sauce

Four large tart apples; one teaspoon ground cinnamon; one-fourth teaspoon ground ginger; one-half cup sugar; water. Pare, core and cut apples into small pieces. Cover with water and boil until very tender. Remove from flame and add spices and sugar. Good hot or cold.

Novel Croquettes

Melt four tablespoons of butter and blend in five tablespoons flour. Add one cup milk gradually and cook over a low flame, stirring constantly. When the mixture is smooth and thick, add one-half teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, one beaten egg yolk and one-half teaspoon lemon juice slowly. Stir in one and one-half cups chopped chicken meat and one-half cup broken walnut meats and mix well.

Season to taste and cool. Some chopped parsley is nice in these. When cool, shape into croquettes roll in crumbs, then in egg and again in crumbs and fry in deep hot shortening, 375 degrees, until a delicate brown. Drain on paper toweling and serve on hot platter.

Lima Bean Stew

Two tablespoons butter; one-half pound dried lima beans; one and one-half teaspoons salt; one-fourth teaspoon pepper; three cups milk; one tablespoon minced parsley; two small onions minced; three cups boiling water; three potatoes, peeled and diced; one-fourth cup fine cracker crumbs.

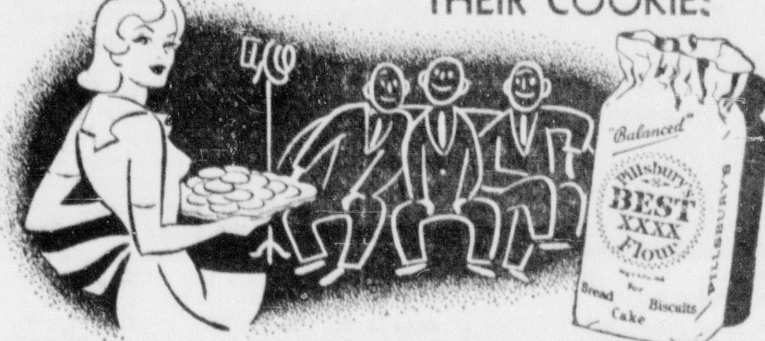

Melt the butter, add the onions and pan-fry two minutes. Then add the lima beans, which have been soaked overnight. Add boiling water and salt and simmer until the beans are almost tender, about an hour and one-half. Then add water as necessary to keep the original amount.

Add the potatoes and peppers and milk, bring to the boiling point and chicken with the cracker crumbs. Serve sprinkled with the parsley and cook 30 minutes more. Pour in the accompanied by thin toast or crisp crackers.

For a quick dessert, especially good for the children, fold one cup of hot applesauce into three stiffly-beaten egg whites. Add one-fourth cup sugar, folding it in gradually. Chill and serve.

PENN-JERSEY CIRCUIT TO OPEN AT LANGHORNE

LANGHORNE, May 19.—The official opening of the 1938 harness racing season will take place at Gage B. Ellis' Village Farm, Langhorne, May 28 and 30, when the Penn-Jersey Circuit gets under way for the third year.

Four races are carded for each day and a vast entry list has been received by the circuit secretary, Norman L. Marshall, who states over 80 stalls will be necessary to accommodate the racing stock.

The Village Farm has enjoyed a reputation for its splendid contests along with the national prominence the Penn-Jersey Circuit has gained for its fast time and as a producer of many Grand Circuit stars.

Steve Phillips, the Hambletonian starter, will fly East from Xenia, Ohio, to officiate as starter. It will be his third year at the Langhorne nursery, where he has gained a host of admirers for his efficient work.

Farm Owner Ellis has set up 1300 additional seats as well as remodeled the grandstand for added comfort for the spectators. A stallion parade, so successful in the past, has been arranged for this year, and Follow Up, the latest addition to the stud ranks at Langhorne, will be given his first public exhibition as a stud.

The $450.00 three-year-old pace has 11 tried and true pacers scheduled to start and among them are several well-known youngsters. Fielders was a winner as a two-year-old in the Penn-Jersey loop last season and will be seen in competition with Direct Dale, 2:21, and Beams Hanover, 2:20 3/4.

The circuit secretary yesterday announced a partial list of stables coming to Langhorne for the week-end of May 28th. Among them are the well-known stables of Bill Bull, Pella, Va.; Harry Goodhart, Reading; Herman Tyson, Doylestown; Harry Craig, Tabor, N. C.; Dunbar Bostwick, Old Westbury, L. I.; John Dill, Freehold, N. J., and W. E. Miller, Washington, D. C.

GIRLS K-O'D IN SOFT BALL GAME CRASH

BUCKINGHAM, May 19.—Polly Haldeman and Peggy Harris collided at the plate as the former tried to score on a short overthrow at third in the fifth inning of the Buckingham-Bensalem girls softball league tilt played here yesterday afternoon. Both girls were "K. O." in the collision and were "out" for several minutes before being revived. However, and were able to resume play after their revival with each receiving a big ovation from the crowd that gathered to witness the exhibition. Though neither was injured seriously except for being shaken up, Harris seemed to have gotten the worst of the collision as she was out the longest of the two. Buckingham won the game, 14-3.

TETTEMER'S FINISH WINS MEET FOR OWLS

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, May 19.—A sensational thrill finish of the one mile relay race by Norman Tettemer who ran the last quarter for Bensalem saved them from defeat at the hands of the Langhorne Redskins in a dual track meet on the Owls cinderpaths here yesterday afternoon.

The victory for Bensalem enabled the Blue and Gray color bearers to romp to four consecutive triumphs on their home track in four meets this year. Thus they concluded the campaign without a setback in a meet other than the County meet. The boys of coach Sherman Dance showed their most power in the broad jump in which they topped Langhorne by an 8-1 margin. On the other hand, Langhorne outscored Bensalem by the same advantage in both the high jump and 440 yard run. However a trio of 6-3 scores for Bensalem evened matters up. And going into the final event on the short end of a 32-31 score, the Owls necessarily had to take the relay race to win the meet. If they took that they would win the meet, 36-35. And that is precisely what they did in a thrill-finish that had everyone on edge.

Summary of events:
880 or half-mile run: 1. Harding Langhorne; 2. Tettemer, Bensalem; 3. Carrigan, Langhorne. Time: 2:18.

"SEABIRD" TO FLY BRI STOL'S FIRST DIRECT-TO-AIRPORT POUCHES

A Bristol-manufactured aircraft, the "Seabird" F-5, an amphibian, is playing its part today in National Air-Mail Week, which marks the 20th anniversary of scheduled air-mail service in the United States, which has developed from a few thousand air letters in 1918, to 760,000,000 in 1937. Pictured at the top is the "Seabird" F-5, manufactured by Fleetwings, Inc., at their plant here, which will fly Bristol's first direct-to-airport mail to Philadelphia, this afternoon. Carl deGanahl, president of Fleetwings, Inc., will pilot the craft. There are also pictured the plane which pioneered air-mail, and a modern airliner of today.

MATCHMAKER STRAFFE HAS CARD COMPLETED

Two youngsters who have fought loose battles on several occasions have been matched for the opening show of the outdoor amateur boxing season. The youths, Roy Albano, Penn Mar, and Bob Montgomery, Eastside, are crowd pleasers and the fans who witness the initial fight program are sure to be elated at these boys.

Matchmaker Johnny Straffe has almost completed his entire card for the show, which will be held next Monday night in the St. Ann's arena, Wood and Franklin streets. All bouts will be held with the sanction of the Middle Atlantic district of the A. A. U.

Quite a number of tickets were sold during the first two nights that they went on sale. In fact, daily, fight patrons are calling and requesting to have their seats reserved for the remainder of the boxing season. St. Ann's and another fight club in Philadelphia are the only two clubs which will hold weekly amateur shows this season.

Straffe is preparing his Bristol staff of fighters for the next show and if possible may use one or two next Monday night. Straffe is also dickering to have the Trenton and Roebeling boxing team take one side of the next show to meet opponents from this locality and Philadelphia.

Tickets may be reserved at the St. Ann's club house by phoning 9934.

Il Duce To Be Able To Swing Balance of Power

or to gain the upper hand in Central Europe or the Mediterranean. Before succumbing, better to strike back with all the force at our command. We might win. If so, so much gained, but if we don't win, there won't be victory for the paper victor either, for we shall have dealt so terrible a blow to the attacker's industrial and economic life, to his internal political situation, that at worst, we are even Stephen when the final accounting is made.

Because of his superior strength on land, on and under the sea, and in the air, observers concede that Mussolini holds the balance of power in the Mediterranean and constitutes a powerful friend—as well as enemy.

It war comes to Europe, Mussolini, it is admitted, can swing the balance for or against any nation or group of nations. This assumes new importance in the light of recent events in Europe such as the Nazi invasion of Austria.

Should European policy re-orient itself into the old orbit of isolation of land-hungry Germany as its objective, success of such a policy will hinge upon Mussolini's willingness or hesitancy in leaving his new-found friend, Adolf Hitler.

In whatever proportion Il Duce is willing to forego Germany—and there is no surface indication at present that he is even remotely toying with the idea—in that ratio will Britain and France succeed in lining up Italy as an ally.

In the minds of many observers Italian diplomacy has doubled back two decades. Italy today is "fighting 1915 over the green-baize tables;" in short, she has grown so powerful in 16 years that Britain woos her friendship and Germany seeks to retain it, just as in the days when this same Mussolini agitated for Italian intervention in the World War.
